DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
 - I. Claims 1-28, and 31, drawn to an electronics assembly, and electronic insert element, a backplane element, a backplane assembly, a high density electronics assembly housing structure, and a user-configurable electronics assembly, classified in class 361, subclass 796.
 - II. Claim 29, drawn to a method of configuring a user-configurable electronics assembly, classified in class 29, subclass 830+.
 - III. Claim 30, drawn to a method of reducing the cross-talk associated with a plurality of DSL circuits disposed on a common substrate, classified in class 702, subclass 117+.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Inventions II and I are related as process of making and product made. The inventions are distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) that the process as claimed can be used to make other and materially different product or (2) that the product as claimed can be made by another and materially different process (MPEP § 806.05(f)). In the instant case the method as claimed can be used to make other and materially different product.

Inventions III and I are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case the different inventions of invention III is related to a method for reducing a cross-talk between a DSL circuit on a substrate, and invention I is related to a plurality of boards fitted into a chassis assembly.

Inventions III and II are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case the different inventions of invention III is related to a method for reducing a cross-talk between a DSL circuit on a substrate, and invention II is related to a method of configuring a user-configurable electronics assembly.

2. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

3. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group III is not required for Group II, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

4. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group III is not required for Group I, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

5. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group II is not required for Group I, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
